

Would your facility benefit from a trained Facility Dog?

Facility Dogs are trained to perform specific tasks, are placed with working professionals, and can be a valuable addition to their work with people with disabilities or vulnerable populations. Examples of facilities include educational environments, therapeutic practices or forensic settings. Tailored placements ensure dogs meet the unique needs of the professional and their clients.

HOW FACILITY DOGS HELP

- Enhances engagement for students or patients by integrating skills into therapies or classroom activities
- Provides deep pressure to reduce anxiety and promote relaxation
- Inspire clients or students to collaborate and build confidence

Facility Dogs are provided to our clients at zero cost thanks to donor support. Applicants must be employed a minimum of 20 hours per week in a role that directly serves individuals with disabilities.
